

POLICE RAKE CITY FOR NEGRO BRUTE

Straining to Find Man Who Beat Aged Woman
Storekeeper.

VICTIM, QUITE WEAK,
MAY YET RECOVER

Mrs. Annie Gladman, of Georgetown, Aged 62, Assailed in Her Shop, and Thief Robs Till.

Brutally beaten and assaulted by an unidentified negro until she lost consciousness, and left for dead on the floor of her confectionery store in the basement of her home, 1219 Twenty-eighth street northwest, Mrs. Annie E.
Gladman, sixty-two years of age, is in a critical condition today in the Georgetown University Hospital.

Although weak from loss of blood and suffering intense pain from the injuries she received at the hands of the negro, the doctors said this morning that she would probably recover.

A big negro, tall and black, with a gash on his head or face, is being sought by the police in the District today, and this meager description is the only clue on which the detectives have to work. The police are satisfied that the man is not a resident of Georgetown and unless there are unexpected developments in the case, the police have but little hope of catching him.

The attack was one of the most brutal of its kind that has ever occurred in the District.

Tried to Kill Victim.
It is evident that the negro intended killing his victim so that he could rob the cash drawer, and it was not until the aged woman fell to the floor unconscious and apparently dead that he stopped raining blows on her head with a heavy piece of flooring.

Entering the little confectionery shop, which is about five feet below the sidewalk, shortly after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the negro asked for a piece of pie. He paid for the pie, and then demanded more. Mrs. Gladman charged for a large bottle of ginger ale.
Told that it was 19 cents, the negro said it was too much and that he didn't want any.

"I suppose you run this store by yourself," the negro remarked in what appeared to be a friendly way. "I should think you'd be afraid to stay here all by yourself. It's dangerous for an old woman to be alone in a place like this."

Evidently suspecting that the negro meant to do her harm, Mrs. Gladman procured a blackjack which she kept behind the counter. The negro then asked her if she had any apples, and while she was leaning over to get some from a box she was dealt a stunning blow on the head with some heavy object.

Did Not Stun Her.
The blow, however, did not render her unconscious, and in spite of her advanced years Mrs. Gladman managed to get on her feet, and raising her right arm struck the negro squarely in the face with the blackjack. Mrs. Gladman is positive that the instrument broke the flesh, as blood spurted from his cheek.

Recovering from the blow in the face the negro picked up a heavy piece of flooring and began striking the woman over the head.

Just what happened after the negro began beating her with the board is not known, as Mrs. Gladman cannot remember anything after the first blows. Showing unusual pluck, she struggled with her assailant until her voice of strength was lost, but from the condition of the rooms and the number of bruises on her head and body it is evident that the negro continued his awful attack after she lost consciousness.

The room showed every evidence of a terrible struggle and the police, wondering how a frail woman of advanced years could have resisted the attack of a large negro for even a second. On the floor of the store was found the piece of flooring that the negro used as a weapon. It was covered with blood and matted gray hair from the woman's head still clinging to the improvised club.

Vinegar Bottle Used.
The police are inclined to the theory that the negro first assaulted Mrs.
Gladman with a large vinegar bottle, which was on the counter. While she was leaning over to get the apples, it is thought, the negro picked up the bottle and struck her over the head.
The blow must have been struck with terrific force, as the bottle was shattered, and many pieces of glass were found in the woman's head. It is considered remarkable by the physician that the blow did not render her unconscious immediately.

Mrs. Gladman fell directly in front of the cash drawer, and the man must have stepped over her body to have jerked open the drawer and rifled it.
There was about $10 in the cash drawer.
In a chaotic bag around the woman's neck was $5 which the negro did not get, and in a room on the second floor of the house, valued at $100 in gold, which the negro overlooked in his hurried flight.

Policemen Go By.
Less than five minutes before the aged woman was discovered in front of her store, Policemen Morgan and Hess, of No. 7, had walked by the house.
The patrolmen heard nothing to indicate that there was anything wrong in the store, and it is thought the sight of the two bluecoats passing the place may have frightened the negro, and caused him to desist in the attack.

Captain Schneider, commanding the seventh police precinct, immediately detached all of his available men on the case. Detectives Cox, Berman and Burlingame were sent to the house from headquarters, and in a short time a general alarm was sent out for the negro.

GETS WATER SUPPLY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—The municipal water supply project, commonly known as the Hetch Hetch supply, was carried at the election held in this city by a majority approximating 3 to 1. It is estimated that it will take $45,000,000 to acquire all the necessary rights and purchase the distribution system in the city, as well as build the transmission line.

Riggs—I understand that you encourage your son to practice on the corner.

ing two months, but today I bought the Couple Marry a Second Time To Get Court Records Clear

Philip L. Eanes and Gertrude O. Webster, of Moseley's Junction, Va., Find First Wedding Was Not Straight According to the Law.

Philip L. Eanes and Gertrude O. Webster, of Moseley's Junction, Va., are inclined to believe there is something in the twenty-three hoodoo after all, for it has become necessary that the couple should be married within twenty-three days.

The last trip to the altar was made Thursday afternoon, after it developed that the first marriage wasn't a marriage, owing to a mix-up in which a cabman took the couple to the wrong minister. Now the knot is tied right and the couple has returned home, thankful, to say the least of it.

Engaged and newly married couples have many trials and tribulations and are liable to get confused on the details of their wedding arrangements.
But in this case neither Mr. Eanes nor his bride were in any way responsible for the mistake and knew nothing of it until two official letters from the clerk of the court at Washington reached them in their Virginia home informing them that they had not been married at all.

A cabman, who is said to have imbibed too freely, and a minister who had no authority to perform marriage ceremonies in the District of Columbia were alone responsible for the second trip of the young couple to Washington.

Mr. Eanes and his bride came to Washington October 19 to be married.
They procured a license and the Rev.
J. J. Muir was named as the officiating clergyman. Hiring a carriage, the young couple started off to find the home of Dr. Muir. Knowing little of Washington, they were wholly at the mercy of the cabman's knowledge of streets, and the first thing they knew they were lost and none of the three knew which way to go.

Having overheard their conversation and being able to grasp the idea that they were looking for a minister to marry them, the cabman suggested that he would find one. So he drove them to the Central Union Mission, where the services of the Rev. J. M. Zella were solicited and the marriage performed.

When Mr. Zella returned the license to the court it was discovered that the license had been issued to the Rev. Mr.
Muir, who, under the circumstances, was the only person legally qualified to perform the ceremony. Furthermore, it was found that Mr. Zella was not a registered minister authorized by the courts to perform marriage, and Clerk Young was then put to the painful necessity of informing the young couple that they were not married at all.

So Mr. Young wrote an official letter in which he explained the circumstances and awaited a reply. None came, and he wrote a second letter. It developed that Mr. Eanes and his bride had not received the first letter, but they came post haste to Washington upon the request of the secretary of the court, for a marriage license could be issued, and the office of the Rev. J. B. McLoughlin could be reached, just as quick was a second ceremony performed, and there was no mistake this time.

Mr. and Mrs. Eanes, fully assured that they were really married this trip, again departed for their home in Moseley's Junction and the law was satisfied.

BASEBALL MAGNATE NAMED CO-RESPONDENT

President Ebbets, of Brooklyn Club, Accused in Divorce Suit of His Friend, C. R. Nott—Sensational Charges Made.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Charles H.
Ebbets, president of the Brooklyn Baseball Club, is named in a suit for divorce brought by Claude R. Nott against his wife, Grace. Mr. Nott is manager of the Hotel Somerset, at 159 West Forty-seventh street, and of the Colonial Hotel, at 300 West 15th street. He is one of the best known hotel men in the country.

Lawyer George W. Witte has acknowledged that papers in the case have been served. Both parties to the suit have exerted every endeavor to avoid publicity, and an effort was made to have the testimony taken by a referee.
The baseball magnate and his wife have been living apart for three years, and Mrs. Nott is alleged to have been the cause of the separation. Unsuccessful efforts had been made to learn from Mrs. Ebbets the details of her grievance, and only a few intimate friends of the family knew the full story.

Through the filing of the suit by Mr.
Nott many will now learn for the first time the true cause of the breaking up of the Ebbets home. While the devotion of Ebbets to Mrs. Nott is alleged to have extended over five years, the hotel man was, it is said, in complete ignorance until a year ago, when he and his wife also separated. Up to that time he and Ebbets had been on the most friendly terms.

Ebbets, it is alleged, first met Mrs.
Nott at a poker party given by him at the Hotel Somerset. Mrs. Nott is a tall, statuesque, brunette, and from that time, it is alleged, supplanted in his affections the wife to whom he had been married for more than thirty years and who is the mother of several children, four of whom are now alive.

Detectives working on the divorce case have, it is said, traced the wife to Flatbush. It is alleged that she is supporting an establishment at 1496 G street, in which Mrs. Nott passes by her own name, and where she is known to the neighbors as Mr. Nott. Among those who have "established his identity" is said to be his daughter, Mrs.
Frank Hendricks, whose home is only three blocks away.

This daughter and Mrs. Ebbets will be called as witnesses in the case.
Friends of the family declare that the wife is reluctant to testify against her husband, despite the fact that he has deserted her. She is anxious, they declare, to protect her three daughters.
Mrs. Hendricks, Mrs. Anna Booth, and her sixteen-year-old daughter Genevieve, from the disgrace of publicity.
They declare she will not be dragged into the case unless she cannot help it.

McHENNY FUNERAL TRAGEDY REVEALS WILL BE ON MONDAY SHOCKING ORGIES

The Rev. C. Ernest Smith Will Conduct the Services.

The body of Oliver McHenry will be laid away in Rock Creek Cemetery Monday afternoon, following funeral services to be conducted by the Rev. C.
Ernest Smith, rector of St. Thomas' Church, at the McHenry home, 2114 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Mr. McHenry was seventy-five years old, but his death was entirely unexpected, as he had been in the best of health, apparently. He died suddenly early yesterday morning, while in bed at his home. Cerebral hemorrhages caused death.

Mr. McHenry had been a resident of the District for fifteen years. He was born at Milford, Conn., County Donegal, Ireland, in 1833, came to America when he was eleven years old, and turned his energies to the acquisition of practical knowledge of the operation of gas plants.

During the civil war he was a member of a North Carolina regiment. After the war he helped organize the Montgomery Grays, a famous drill regiment.
His wife, Mrs. F. McHenry, a brother, John S. McHenry, three sons, Oliver, McHenry, James S. McHenry, and Dr. George A. McHenry, and one daughter, Miss Catherine McHenry, survive.
